1. On 5 February, the barracks installation on the southeast side of Torgauer Strasse in Leipzig-Heiterblick quartered about 1,200 troops. Sentries wore red-bordered black epaulets. Almost all quarters were lighted at nightfall. On 28 January, about 200 soldiers practiced with small arms at group level in the installation. At about 9 a.m., about 70 soldiers wearing red-bordered black epaulets, some with tank insignia, and carrying small arms, spades and gas masks moved from the barracks installation toward the troop training grounds. A T-34/85 tank practiced driving at the training grounds. On 3 February, three T-34/85 tanks practiced driving while about 150 to 200 received field training, on the training grounds. A convoy of 15 trucks, some of them occupied by 4 to 6 men, returned to the barracks installation from the direction of Taucha.

7. On 3 February, the Hindenburg Kaserne was occupied by about 150 soldiers who wore black-bordered blue epaulets and some uniformed women who wore black-bordered blue epaulets. The installation was about 30 percent lighted in the evening. About 100 soldiers were seen through the windows of the mess hall on the ground floor of the southern administrative building on 26 January. The artillery piece that moved out of the installation on 2 December 1952 was a SU-76 gun.
8. On 3 February, the Treitzsche Kaserne on the east side of Olbricht Strasse, south of Danziger Strasse and west of Witzleben Strasse, quartered a unit whose personnel wore black-bordered crimson epaulets and included uniformed women who also wore black-bordered crimson epaulets. The southern section of the installation housed troops that maintained a dog kennel. On 2 February, about 40 soldiers with fixed bayonets, carrying two machine guns and targets marched into the installation. Source believed that they came from firing
